TREATMENT OF SWINE MANGE

Cause of Disease is Small Animal Parasite Which Burrows Into Outer Layers of the Skin.

Mange is a disease of swine prevalent in some sections of this country. However, it does not appear to be a common disease in the United States, generally, but judging from the numerous references to swine mange in European countries, it would seem that it is a common disease there.

The cause of swine mange is a very small animal parasite which burrows into the outer layers of the skin. The adult female lays eggs which hatch into young mites, and these go through the various stages of development in the outer layer of the skin of swine.

The symptoms of mange are first seen in suckling pigs. They scratch and dig at their sides and neck with their hind feet, and often rub against posts and other objects. After weaning the pigs do not develop as they should

The treatment of swine mange consists in the external application of substances that will kill the parasite without injuring the animal, and the disinfection of the quarters so that the animal will not become infected again. In addition to the medical and sanitary treatment it is also important to give the animals good care and plenty of nourishing food. A thin, unthrifty hog is particularly susceptible to the disease.

There are many substances that will kill the parasites and cure swine mange when properly applied. The best form to apply the remedy is in a solution or emulsion that can be applied to all parts of the pig's body. Ointments applied to visibly affected parts are useful in keeping the disease in check, but the whole surface of the pig's body should be thoroughly treated, in order to complete a cura This is best done by dipping the pig. or by scrubbing or "hand dressing" where dipping is not practical.

One of the most efficient and economical remedies is the lime and sulphur dip made from the following formula: Fresh lime, eight pounds; flowers of sulphur, 24 pounds; water, 100 gallons.

Weigh the lime and sulphur care fully, slake the lime with sufficient water to form a thick paste. Sift the sulphur and mix well with a hoe. Put this mixture in a kettle with 25 or 30 gallons of water and boil for at least one hour-two hours is better. In using this dip for sheep it is allowed to settle and only the clear, orange colored liquid is used. In dipping swine the whole mass is used. The dip should be warm-100 degrees to 110 degrees F.

After dipping or treating swine they should be placed in clean, uninfected quarters. The floors, partitions and other parts of the buildings should, after the removal of all litter and dirt, be thoroughly saturated with a dipping solution. This should be applied with a force pump which drives the solution into all cracks. The pens should also be white washed, care being taken to fill all cracks well.

FEEDING OF GROWING PIGS

Animal Should Have All He Can Eat of Bulky Rather Than of the Concentrated Foods.

Nothing remunerates the farmer more quickly than a pig that makes gains over and above the value of the food consumed each day. The mere feeding of pigs to keep them alive is most wasteful. It should be kept constantly in mind that the feed for a growing pig and one that is being fattened is entirely different.

The growing pig should have practically all that he can eat of bulky food rather than of concentrated food. An alfalfa pasture does this and is the most economical way of feeding growing pigs. While the pigs are young the alfalfa pasture should be supplemented with skim milk with a little meal added. They will be at most ready for the block when fed is this way. Finish for the last three of four weeks with some kind of grain

Make-Up of Thoroughbred. Many things enter into the make up of a thoroughbred horse—the feet and legs must be right, the legs straight and well set under the body, The head should be well poised and the expression of the face good. The shoulders, ribs and thighs symmetrical, and the whole animal covered with a good coat of hair.
